NEWBORN SESSION PREPARATION

Newborn Photography, done right takes a great amount of patience and time. I want to give you photos that are as much a piece of Art as they are memories of your precious baby.

Because we are on the baby's schedule, a newborn session could take as long as 3 hours. This is not a typical portrait session; we don't just put the baby down on a blanket and snap a photo, as you will soon find out.

Newborn sessions are planned for a baby that is up to 2 weeks old. Let me explain why. At this age, they are still flexible and sleepy from being in the womb. Older babies don't curl up in these newborn poses.

For most portraits the baby will be undressed so you will need to take this into consideration when choosing props and locations. Trust me, it is not a question of if they will relieve themselves but When. Also, ensure that the thermostat is set warm enough for your unclothed infant.

Try and interact with your baby as much as you can prior to the session - keep them awake if you can.

This helps us to start with a baby that is ready for some sleep and could mean the difference between starting immediately and starting 30 minutes later. Please feed the baby fully immediately prior to your session. A full baby is a sleepy baby. If nursing, please stay away from the following foods and beverages 2 days prior to your session: Acidic foods, gassy vegetables, soda, coffee and beer.

MOST IMPORTANTLY RELAX.

MATERNITY

Every Pregnancy is something to be celebrated its a special time in a Mother's live, one that may only be given to for a Specific period of time.

NEWBORN

Newborn sessions are planned for a baby that is up to 2 weeks old.

THREE MONTHS

Between birth and three months, your baby may start to:

- ~ Smile off and on
- ~ Raise his/her head and chest when on his/her tummy
- ~ Track objects with his/her eyes and gradually decrease eye crossing

SIX MONTHS

- ~ Babies are really learning to reach out and manipulate the world around them
- ~ Roll over from front to back or back to front
- ~ Babble, making sounds - Laugh
- ~ Sit up with support and have great head control

NINE MONTHS

- ~ Start to crawl. This can include scooting. Some babies never crawl, moving directly from scooting to walking.
- ~ Sit without support
- ~ Clap and play games such as patty-cake and peekaboo
- ~ Learn to pull up to a standing position

TWELVE MONTHS

- ~ Begin feeding themselves.
- ~ Cruise, or move around the room on his/her feet while holding onto the furniture (Great for Outdoor Sessions)
- ~ Begin "pretend play" by copying you or using objects correctly, such as pretending to talk on the phone.
- ~ Takes his/her first steps. This usually happens right around one year, but it can vary greatly.
